About the AuthorI was raised on a dairy farm in southern Idaho and have retained to this day an intense hatred for dairy cows and all other livestock to a lesser degree. The twice a day juicing of those senseless beasts left an ugly, indelible mark on me. I decided long ago, never again. I haven't and I won't. My first attempt at writing was at the Minnesota State Fair while attempting to sell wood sculptures of historic western faces. The good folks there held no appreciation for cowboys and Indians so the two week fair was spent in the start of a book on the art of carving faces. An immediate success. Sold thousands almost before a blink. The next book on relief carving has been almost as successful. Both continue to sell well. Even after winning several awards for wood sculpture a slow burnout destroyed any desire to continue. The love of woodworking, however, turned my attention to the design and manufacture of outdoor furniture. With a classic new look. Tired of the age-old, mundane style of outdoor furniture a determination arose to produce swings, picnic tables, chairs, gliders, lounges and others with sleek flowing lines yet strong and durable. Proud of the outcome a decision was made to share the knowlege with others by writing how-to books on the making of this beautiful line of furniture. Four are available with more to come. Try them all. You'll have a lot of fun.
